An Ancient Tradition

It is well known that a great Dacian King, at his high priest's advice, decided to cut down the grapevine. What is less known is that he took this decision not only to reduce wine consumption but also reduce the foreign interest in Dacian territories. Documents and archaeological evidence prove the existance of grapevines in the heart of Dealu Mare since the 14th and the 15th centuries and mention the remarkable quality of the wine produced here.
